

Welcome Home!

Considering leaving your precious little treasure in someone else's care is one of the most difficult decisions a parent will ever have to make! But at Buckden Day Nursery they take this dilemma very seriously.

"Our approach to childcare has been built in response to the needs of today's children & their parents", says Jane Roberts the new owner of the nursery. "I want children to have a real home from home experience from the minute they walk through our door to the minute they go home".

The whole Nursery culture is based on four key beliefs:

Children need to be nurtured in a loving, inspiring and fulfilling environment

Children need to be shown patience, compassion and encouragement

Nutrition is central to a child's intellectual and physical well-being

Learning is effortless when play and exploration is experienced through freedom of choice

"We have five key rooms that have been designed to meet the physical, intellectual, emotional and social needs of our different age groups" says Becky Thomas, the nursery's manager, "each existing within a considered framework. This ensures that all our children are able to explore and participate in a variety of activities, which are both challenging and interesting each and every day".

Since taking over the already successful nursery Jane has built upon this and added some really amazing new features.

"The first thing I wanted to do" says Jane "was to bring in a Nursery Chef that could work as part of the team ensuring all food produced on the premises was of a very high standard. All our food is cooked from scratch from daily nutritional baby purees to a full roast dinner, nothing is left to chance".

And with the addition of a consultant nutritionalist their menus really do need to be seen to be believed. Another area Jane has improved on is looking at the general fitness & well-being of the children by introducing a tiddler's indoor gym! No you are reading this correctly, Jane has installed a mini exercise bike, mini treadmill and a mini ski walker ensuring that even if the weather is bad children can still work off some of their excess energy.

To top all this Music and Dance classes are also being introduced as part of the pre-school weekly curriculum so lots to keep the little ones busy & stimulated.

So it looks like Buckden Day Nursery is really setting new standards in childcare in this region and going that extra mile to ensure they become a Nursery of Choice for both you and your child.
